

Carlos Arguello graduated from UNI and the SBI program in May of 2007.

Carlos operated two businesses in the program --

CAAL Translations and La Prensa (Hispanic newspaper). CAAL continues to provide translation services and La Prensa has expanded into two new markets and doubled its labor force. La Prensa has also added an online version at www.laprensaiowa.com.

“I can’t stress enough how important the help I received from the JPEC incubator was to me and the forming of my businesses. I can say with full certainty that had it not been for the help, coaching, and resources I received from this program, my businesses would not be as successful as they are today.

- Carlos

Where Are They Now?

Catching up with some SBI graduates

Tyson Hanish graduated from UNI and the SBI program in December of 2008.

His website, www.bigleagueanalysis.com, was officially launched in the Spring of 2009, and he held his first baseball camp in Huron, South Dakota, this summer. His company provides professional analysis of K-12 baseball players’ swings and offers suggestions and exercises for improvement.

Stephen Rausch graduated from UNI and the SBI program in May of 2009. During his time in the SBI program, he grew his family business, Rausch Brothers Trucking, substantially and expanded it from construction trucking to other markets.

